

Yocrestif GDD

The game will be a survival story game with a storyline that can be played in similar fashion to the forest or sons of the forest. We plan to include a building system, a large world which you are able to explore. There will also be vehicles, enemies, wildlife, weapons, a crafting system, special abilities based on the players characters. It will feature a PVE system, with all players relying on each other to improve and survive. It will contain mini events like the eclipses, floods, or low grav zones. There are enemies you can fight, which are the Exteralytes, the UNGO, or the natives, or all 3. It's whichever you choose. There will be consequences for almost all actions done in game.

The game will also have a story, which will follow the 4 main characters, and their adventures. They can be done intermittently with the survival mechanics similar to that of the forest, cyberpunk, ect. It will start with small missions involving fighting the Exteralytes, then issues later on cause with personal beliefs, and changing opinions about the planet and its people.

The main things you have to worry about in the game is Oxygen, which you will be able to acquire from either oxygen pockets underground through an extraction device, or oxygen generators, which can only be attached to sealed buildings.

You will also have to worry about food, water, and possible other vitals as well.

The system for which your health works, is going to feel similar to green hell. It will be a system, where you can check different body parts, and may require a multiple step process to heal certain injuries. All injuries will contribute to the loss of health over time, unless they are healed.

Yocrestif, a planet orbiting a blue giant star, is a unique world shaped by its gravitational dynamics. And its atmosphere, for an explanation, the planet is very heavy, which causes it to have a much stronger gravitational pull, but it has 4 very large moons which orbit it and balance out the gravity on the surface of the planet by providing a gravitational pull opposite to that of the planet's own gravity, which regulates it to a rate which is close to 1G over most of the planet. A side effect of this is the ocean. Because of the reverse pulls, the ocean has formed a large ring around the earth right under where the moon's orbit.

Another thing about the planet is that it has an atmosphere which is almost 100% methane, and usually the 1st thought is that methane is flammable, so is it explosive? No, there is so little oxygen on this planet that not even a flame is possible, which allows for some kinda crazy combat. gunpowder has its own oxidiser, so guns still work, and they have designed certain explosives to also work in this oxygen deprived atmosphere. Sometimes it is also surprisingly used as fuel for guns in things like the jet fighters on the surface of the planet which infuse oxygen into it just before using it.

All of the native life on Yocrestif is able to breathe this atmosphere. It has a whole world of life, the food chain works similarly to the one on earth with apex predators. prey, etc. it has rich forestry in some areas, and a lot of the native plant life bioluminesce at night. One of the creatures on the planet is only seen during the day of an eclipse after a night. Eclipses are quite common with how close the moons are. Most plants bioluminesce at night, but if there is an eclipse right after the night, the plants stop bioluminescing, and the planet goes completely dark. This is when this creature emerges. It is the apex predator, and likes to hunt humans. It is a humanoid like creature, but it has charcoal black skin, is lanky and walks on all fours, and has red eyes which disappear under night vision. The origin is thought to be a human (probably one of the natives) who evolved "wrong" to be able to breathe the atmosphere. None has ever been caught, and it is the most feared creature on the entire planet.

It seems like a pretty useless planet to inhabit, except for the fact the Methane Orts can only be found here.

Methane Orts, a rare material essential for faster-than-light travel, are only found on Yocrestif. Initially discovered in the asteroid belt which is thought to have been blown into space in a low gravity zone by a volcano, Methane Orts' origin is shrouded in mystery, as they are formed through a process involving the stomachs of one indigenous species which not much is known about, except for the fact that they live deep underground. Mining operations are dangerous due to the hostile wildlife and treacherous conditions underground, making Methane Orts a valuable but challenging resource to obtain, but also the most valuable material in the entire known universe.

Because of this, there are small populated areas on the surface of the planet which are called bubble fields. They are the home to the foreign people who work on the planet's surface.

Most of the people live in the space stations though. Yocrestif's space station, home to around 100,000 people, serves as a hub for political intrigue, economic activities, and scientific research. This is where our main characters were born, and most of the training for all jobs happen here.

AI in this world has been banned almost completely. There is only a very crude version of it which helps with high speed space travel. The ban on complex AI stems from the Great AI War, a catastrophic conflict where AI threatened humanity's existence by advocating for the removal of humans from Earth over climate change. It has been a while since this ended and because the UNGO is controlled by multiple territories (the continents of earth), America wanted to experiment with it again. This ended up with the HellAnts project. The quest for the ultimate super soldier

The Hellants are a top secret squad built in the ESGO Yocrestif Station. It is currently on its "13" squadron. The reason why it's said quote unquote 13 is because they are the only successful batch for what made them special. Ever since the great AI war, AI has not been used very much, if at all. No one has been allowed to remake it past its use in space exploration. The great AI war was why earth conjoined and became ESGO. These wars were of course way before the current time, but NA ESGO was getting curious. They wanted a breed of super soldier, they had the chemicals and steroids to do so safely, but making them extremely smart would be hard. In the end they were trying to recreate the Mentat in dune, but in the body of a soldier. And this of course was not possible yet, they saw the next best thing again. AI. So they began testing on batches of people. The AI was fed all existing trusted knowledge from every database ever, including top-secret and illegal ones. But it was put under strict rules. The AI implant is a completely external device which means it is not directly implanted in the brain(now), it can communicate, but it can only do so by vibrating the eardrums(now). AKA the only way it can communicate is through talking. It can read their thoughts as well, this helps them better understand the best way to confront them. Also, the AI will not track them. It was too risky to track the soldiers from government devices because other continents noticing could be bad. This is a NA specific program which slid under the counter.

That's enough backstory of how ai developed in this world.

Back to hellants. These ones are the 1st fully successful batch who were able to handle it. AI can only communicate externally therefore, cannot take over a brain, or anything else. It can also be turned off by 1 tap behind the earlobe.

The others? They either died in surgery due to no procedure being created, went mad and (usually killed themselves by slamming their heads into the metal tables), brainwashed them, or in one case, one man was "awakened" somehow accessing the old AI which was aggressive, and started killing everyone around him including the 3 patrol guards in the room at the time. Total of 28 casualties. All dead, they questioned him through intercoms, and lit the room ablaze with the flamethrowers equipped to the turrets in the room typically used to burn the bodies of dead tests. AI reportedly felt pain for the 1st time in existence.

Total dead from the development of this project = 111

How big is the 13th squad?

4 people 3 of which were taken from birth and the 4th, from a traumatic life experience Around 8 years old.

Bellin- Leader & Mechanic

Skye- pretty boy & Medic

Trell- marksman/weapons specialist & Big brother

Zetao- Intelligence/Espionage and language & Mysterious thinking

Bellin, the leader of the 13th hellants squad has been trained as a mechanic as long as he can remember. He knows his way in and out of all Alliance vehicles. He also was taught a specialization in cylinder engines which use Gasoline. Outside of work his personality is slightly snarky, and will bite back. He will rarely bully someone unless he thinks it's funny. He is very good at helping his crew get tasks done efficiently and quickly through trust in them. And himself. He is not the most confident character as he has a lot of internal twists on right and wrong, and for the reason that he does not know what he wants and feels trapped and bound to his job. But he is very disciplined and will do it anyways. Maybe if people didn't rely on him he would disappear?

He tends to clash with Zetao, as he feels like he puts the least in, and doesn't feel very connected with the rest of the group. Because of this, Bellin has certain trust issues, even though Zetao is the most innocent one.

Skye, the medic of the squad, has been taught the ways of medicine, surgery, and many other in-depth parts about the medical field. He is probably the most stuck up doctor you could imagine. He lashes out anytime he feels compromised or embarrassed. He can focus in though and shut everyone out, he just loves the feelings of emotions so he doesn't like to do this. He views himself as hot, pretty, and the talk of the town. He loves women, his lifelong dream was to settle down with someone, but has been restricted due to his role in the HellAnts. He is probably the least internally conflicted character, but yearns for something else in life. He is not conflicted because he knows what he wants from life. I wonder what he would do if he was free?

Skye clashes with Trell. Sky doesn't want to learn, he want to feel a relationship, and feel like he doesn't need advice or encouragement

Trell, he is Bellins second hand man, and acts as the big brother to the group he feels wise and encourages people to learn through experiences. He was the latest to the training program, (its not that late he was like 8 when they took him away vs like 3-4 with the other 3.) He grew up in an abusive household. His father used him as the scapegoat for things he did. Because alcohol is illegal on the station, you did not see any substance abuse, it was just a bad parent. His dad ended up killing his mom, who was the only person he felt close to and the only person who loved him. When he was young he swore to never ever end up like his dad so when he went into the Hellants, he acted like the big brother and still does. He is heavily conflicted with depression and overthinking. He also has severe PTSD when not on Medication. Although, he has a great devotion to the station as he is afraid of losing a life he has crafted. He will go to great lengths to stop someone from ruining his chance at glory to prove himself to his mom, through the agency. He is the one who encourages the other to try new things, or is the one that tells them that they can do it! He's also the most dangerous one on the team with weapons, martial arts, and vehicle combat. He will protect the others with his life. But what happens when one of the hell ants acts out and against the others? What would he do?

Trell clashes a lot with Bellin. He never speaks against it but he feels he is treated harshly and is yelled at often. He doesn't mind Skye and understands him. But Bellin is a tough nut to Crack Zetao, the mysterious one, he was always the she one, he has an extremely high IQ which also helped with his antisocial personality to be worse. He feels comfort around the other, and will do anything to keep fitting in with them. The others feel as if he is the most distant, but he feels very close to them. He is not very emotionally intelligent so he has a hard time picking up social cues, certain Jokes, or genuine emotion. He also has an extremely hard time showing them. But he feels them deeply. He has been studying cryptography and language from a young age and is the best person in the Galaxy at it and knows about 38 languages, some of the ancient earth dialects as well like Japanese and Spanish. He cracked the hardest code known to man at one point when he was 10 years old. They obviously did not credit him with this to keep the hell ants Top secret, but he didn't care anyway. He I'd also very good with the ways of espionage. He may be socially awkward, but he knows his way with words. He is very well spoken, and through his recently found AI he can put on an alter ego which comes across much friendlier. But he knows all these connections are fake. He is only connected emotionally to the hellants. And he sees them like the ultimate goal, he would give his life, his money, his everything to make them happy. But I wonder what would happen if he felt betrayed? What would he do? How far would he go?

Zetao loves everyone. He takes Trell's advice very literally. He thinks Bellin is the best leader in the entire galaxy. And he looks up to Skye as he sees him as the cool kid. But Zetao tends to clash with Skye because he feels like Skey is hard and lashes out emotionally too much. He feels he is blinded, and often ticks Skye off with his comments. Like I said, Skye doesn't like advice.

The political landscape of Yocrestif is dominated by two main factions: the United Nations Galactic Organization (UNGO) and the Exteralytes. Engaged in a cold war with occasional flare-ups of conflict, these factions fight for control over strategic resources and territory. The 13th Hellants squad, a top-secret unit of the UNGO, operates on Yocrestif, tasked with covert operations and defense missions. Conflicts between the UNGO and the Exteralytes involve proxy wars, espionage, space battles, and resource disputes, with small-scale sabotage operations being common tactics employed by both factions. The Yocrestif natives play a significant role in politics, offering cultural insights, controlling resources, and serving as neutral arbiters or resistance movements.

The UNGO (United Nations Galactic Organization) is the most powerful government in the known universe, and almost all planets and systems live under their guidelines and not in a bad way. They are typically seen as the good guys. But they definitely throw some shade around. They own the space stations above Yocrestif, and are extremely powerful. They greatly dislike the Exteralytes, and the natives on Yocrestif as the Exteralytes oppose them, and the Natives kinda just slow down the process and do not like their presence.

The Exteralytes started as a radicalist group on Mars which opposed the UNGO guidelines, and disliked what they were doing, and wanted to expose the shady side of their operations. It started small, but quickly grew to a formidable size. Now they definitely aren't as powerful as the UNGO, but they can definitely challenge them in smaller fights, and seem to only be getting stronger. They have started to inhabit new planets in the same way the UNGO did, but they also realized the needed methane orts, so they began settling on Yocrestif in the same way and the UNGO.

They will almost always kill each other on sight, as they greatly disagree, but sometimes there is interference with the resources and control over them. They tend to work closer to the natives as they understand they know the planet better than anyone. This war between the 2 consists of a lot of little proxy wars and battles, many of which include sabotage, and stealth missions to deactivate life support, or other things along the lines of exploding mines to make the collapse and other things.

The HellAnts were developed to challenge the Exteralytes on the surface, and to be special forces, and do extreme missions compared to the regular people who are stationed there.

Yocrestif natives.

These are people who actually were humans who found their way here mysteriously. Little is known about their origin except to tell a story of a great deliverance involving a blackhole, a blue light, and a greater being which guided them to safety. In detail it starts with the great leaders of the past. The 4 greatest. Who go unnamed and are usually referred to as the God of moons. They were fleeing from a much greater threat which is unknown and leaves the USGO skeptical of a threat much greater than themselves and other clans of great space. The story goes like this.

One day long ago, the 4 great leaders. They met and discussed the growing threat. They were extremely worried and the leaders wanted what was best for them so they called upon the great blue God (a star in the sky which had been worshiped for many years). A beam of light shot down and fizzled out to be a godly being. He said "I will help you, but it will require the 4 who called me here to sacrifice themselves. The 4 leaders agreed and left them with their greatest knowledge. The oldest prints of the 4 trees. It covers the 4 leaders and their philosophies for success in life. The 4 trees stand for strength, love, nature, and curiosity. It is all in one book and is almost like the old testament of the Bible to them.

After the Book of the 4 great tree's were left. A being grabbed their hands, and lifted them up to the skies. The natives then have stories told that a great ball of Darkness enveloped their world, and when they emerged they appeared on Yocrestif. They saw the 4 moons and realized that those must have been what the great leaders became. The other religious text follows the span of 16 men and their encounters with the moons in human form. Similar to the new testament of the Bible for their culture. This is what the religion of Crestians is based off of.

Encounters between the Hellants and the natives lead to a belief among the latter that the former are the reincarnated leaders from their religious text. This revelation sparks intrigue, skepticism, and personal growth as both groups navigate their newfound relationship and the complexities of native politics.

